MASS MURDER

On June 4, 1989 the unspeakable happened. The Chinese Military slaughtered several hundred of the demonstrators who were protesting for democracy in the Tianamen Square. Tanks and infantry came into the square and shot randomly at unarmed people. The injured were then rushed to the hospital. The protestors had been there for seven weeks until a democratic reform was made. The government had warned them that it would do anything to calm the unrest.

President Bush said he was reprehensive about the use of armed forces to calm the protestors. The next day thirty more were killed by the military. They also started to search the colleges for the ones they thought were responsible for gathering the protestors. When they found someone they thought was a leader, the military brutally murdered the suspected one

On June 4, two passenger trains exploded near Asha on the Kuybyshev Railway. The two trains were carrying children that were both returning and going to a holiday vacation to the Black Sea when the two trains passed by. The sparks created by the trains lit a leaking natural gas pipe causing an explosion that some experts say was about the equivalent of three thousand pounds of TNT. The explosion killed five-hundred and seventy-five passengers. It injured more than eight hundred people. This is the deadliest train wreck in the history of the Soviet Union.

On June 30, there was a military coup designed to take down the political power in Sudan. A colonel named Omar al-Bashir led a group of officers against the Prime Minister, Sadiq al-Mahdi. Under al-Bashir, the military government demolished political parties and based the government off of Islamic legal code. He became chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council for National Salvation, which had legislative and executive powers. The new political system is the Republic of Sudan

On June 21, the US Supreme Court allows the American flag to be burned as a sign of protest. I honestly think this is a wrong decision. The United States is a strong country and willing to hold together in the time of war. Flags are a symbol of the United States and it is very disrespectful, in my eyes to, to burn the flag. Many people would agree. The flag has been a symbol of hope and accomplishment to the United States. When the first person set foot on the moon, he planted an American flag. Also at the end of the Battle of Iwo Jima, the American Marines planted a flag on top of Mount Suribachi, which is one of the most recognized pictures of the war and won a Pulitzer Prize for Photography.

In June, Robert Ballard discovered the wreck of the German Battleship Bismarck. The Bismarck was launched in February 1939 and was sunk in May by the aircraft Fairey Swordfish launched off of the HMS Ark Royal. The ship, which had only one offensive campaign, was supposed to sink into the Atlantic Ocean and raid the Allied resource ships, but on its way it was detected several times which allowed the Royal Navy to attack. The Bismarck did not fair well suffering three hits, but it destroyed the HMS Hood, the pride of the Royal Navy.

COMPUTER CAPER

In September, a computer in London tries to take law into its own hands by calculating who is a criminal. It accused forty one thousand Parisians of prostituting; drug trafficking, murder and exhortation. The first sign of this happening was when hundreds of Parisians received letters accusing them of horrible crimes but only demanding petty fines. An official says an inquiry has been made to see if the computer had a person messing up the crimes. So far no one has been charged and the computer has been turned
